

Newspapers and television stations are the primary sources of economic, social, and political information. Bias can be effectively promoted by the special interest held by a large media company to the community it serves. Communities and metropolitan areas can be greatly influenced by a biased media operator that controls its popular or primary newspapers and television stations.

I urge the FCC not to promote the bias and influence of enterprises by relaxing the present restrictions of multiple ownership of media within communities.